For the seventh time in 13 years, Americans living in homeowners associations and condominiums say they’re overwhelmingly satisfied in their communities.

National survey shows:

- 85% of residents rate their overall community association experience as positive (63%) or neutral (22%).
- 90% say their association’s rules protect and enhance property values (62%) or have a neutral effect (28%); only 4% say the rules harm property values.

In 2018, Community Associations Insitute (CAI) in conjunction with the national survey, further examined the community association housing model in four states—Florida, California, Texas, and Nevada.

81% of Nevada homeowners rate their overall community association living experience as positive (49%) or neutral (32%).

72% say that their elected governing board absolutely or for the most part strives to serve the best interest of the community as a whole.

61% say they would like to see less government control or no change to community association oversight.

87% of Nevada homeowners report their community’s rules protect and enhance property values (63%) or make no difference (24%).

Majority of Nevada residents say a clean/attractive neighborhood is the best thing about living in a community association.
76% say their community manager provides value and support to residents and the community as a whole.

62% say that when neighbors neglect to pay their assessments, a community association should insist that every homeowner pay the assessments.

Nevada community association members spend an average of $101–300 per month for homeowners association assessments or fees.

60% of Nevada homeowners living in a community association report voting in national elections and 47% say they always vote in state and local elections.

For more information and data about community associations, visit www.caionline.org/aboutcommunityassociations